

In the house of Spirit one gains perspective and loses any sense of temporary delusion. Doubt is replaced with a calm realization of simply being.

In the house of Life
there are many open windows.
Honeysuckle, jasmine, lemon, fig.
Forests, fields, and gardens
can be seen from every room.
Breathing, breathing in.

In the house of Mind one is not likely to wait.
There is always an open place at the warmest table.
A sense of consequence gives way to a feeling of quiet permanence.

In the house of Principle one sees hope, one sees completeness.

inspired by seasonal weather patterns, textile design, and architectural detail.

Just as a traditional spirit house is a model of (and stand-in for) an authentic, inhabited dwelling, these songs serve as facsimiles of the adjacent, unheard songs they represent.